mrepsd I see a lot of "motivational" quotes that encourage people to only surround themselves with those that can lift them higher & further their lives & more or less drop anyone that doesn't bring anything of 'value' but if everyone lived by that, who would be elevating who if we were all looking to be elevated while snubbing those beneath us? No one would be getting lifted. I can understand not wanting to be around people that take away from your life & pull you back & make it harder for you to progress, basically sucking away at your energy, that's different. A lot of people only want to be around people that can benefit them, people that can help them move forward without taking a step back to realise that if those people had decided to only have people of benefit around, they'd be on their own. Just like you want to be around

My New Blog: You Have The Same Amount Of Hours In Your Day As Beyoncé keithdube.co/you-have-the-s... RT money, enough money to get out of the drug game and start a business. He had a BMW, but it wasn't M Sport, what kind of self respecting drug dealer would drive a BMW that is not M Sport? Fast forward a few months, he got arrested and did a few years in prison. When he came out, thanks to a guy that he happened to share a cell with at one of the prisons he was locked up in, he now had a connect that gave him access to a better quality of drugs and because he had his back in a few scuffles, he would give him the stuff on consignment. This alone took him from the guy that was leaving his house at 2am to meet up with crackheads that only wanted 1 of each and would probably bring the money in coins, to the guy that was passing ounces and kilos to a little team he had put together. He eventually made enough and thanks to a few investments, he managed to multiply his money and leave the drug game forever. Luck is one of the many variables that we don't account for when we look at people's success. He was lucky enough to meet that guy in prison and if you add in the hard work, it resulted in success for him. I'm not saying he wouldn't have made it without the guy he was lucky enough to bump into, but that's the only difference between him and a lot of the other drugs dealers like him that were around at that time, the connect he was lucky enough to meet.

I used Jay Z as an example in my Instagram post and people didn't waste time in pointing out that he wasn't from a 'privileged' background, not that I said that he was. Most people look at privilege and opportunity as coming from a family with 'money' and can send you to all the best schools and buy you all the Starbucks in the world but that is just one aspect of privilege and privilege is also just one aspect of what makes us different as people and affects our chances of success. Jay Z grew up in Brooklyn and he was a drug dealer for quite some time and it is common knowledge that he had amassed a bit of money before he even became a rapper. Who knows, maybe Hov had a connect that no one else had that allowed him to make money, having money allowed him to spend more time in the studio, which as a rapper you need a lot of and a lot of talented rappers can't afford that. And again, that is not to take away from any hard work that he put it, I'm merely pointing out that he had different circumstances from other people that grew up like him.

Some people see growing up in the same place, as having the exact same circumstances and that isn't true. You can put two people in the exact same environment and they may not both survive

APS @acnpyramid · 31 May 2015

For every objection you might have, ACN reps have amazing answers. And can you guess what each one is asking for?

“Most importantly by you being a customer not only are you going to save money but you will really be helping _____ (SHE/ HE) get promoted and move up in the company. I know she/he would be forever grateful to you. So will you help him/her out? She/he really needs your help!”

Customer Objections

- I have a contract- Will you be using your service for the next two years? Prorated, the money you’re using each month would pay for any fees. Do me a huge favor give my services a try. Help me out.
- I don’t like dishsatellite TV – It has a “Bad Signal” – They offer a 99.9% Guarantee that their signal is strong on their corporate website. But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?
- I love what I have- I know exactly what you mean. If you have anything long enough you will love to live it. You will also learn to love your new services, especially with the money you’re saving, and you’re getting more for the money you are spending. But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?
- I have “Bad Credit”- Work something out perhaps over a family member turns temporarily. But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?
- I need to think about it- I know exactly what you mean. I know you don’t want to make a decision you are going to regret. If you say yes today, you will help me get promoted. Cancel with in 30 days or before installed, and you will pay no money. But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?
- Send me info- Walk them through the order online. H.O. or - I will come by your home within an hour to help, but what is holding you back from helping me out right now? What info do you need to know? But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?
- I need to talk to my spouse- I’m sure your spouse won’t mind you saving them money. & if you want I can come by your house today or tomorrow, because there is no way you can explain exactly the way I said it... [Grocery store analogy] If you were shopping at the store and found the items you already use for a cheaper price, would you need to ask permission before you bought them? But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?
- Never heard of your company- We are a “no-caller” just like Best Buy and Costco, etc. You do not get a bill from Best Buy, you get it from the carrier. It is the same here. But more importantly, will you do me a HUGE FAVOR, help me out and give my services a try PLEASE?

Do you see anything wrong here? Using the potential customer’s morals and ethics in order to get into their pocket. Do you normally see legitimate businessmen asking for favors? Not “Do me a huge favor! Pleaseeeeeee!” This is ridiculous.

It is presented as if you’ll save a ton of money, but if you’ve done your research, you soon realize prices are not that competitive. It mainly depends on your region. But the argument is used as if ACN helps you out in half your phone bill, which isn’t the case.

Oh, now seriously? They’re so desperate to get you to sign up with them that they suggest you use another family member’s name? At the point in the presentation you should get up, politely excuse yourself and leave.

Again, using people’s emotion in a decision that involves their finances is a scary thing to do. I agree they’re probably not the only ones using this tactic, but you get an idea where they’re ready to go.

Have they expecting the potential customer to act on the spot, make an irrational, spontaneous and impulsive decision. If you ever have to be in that situation, either to purchase a service or be recruited, politely tell them you want to wait a little longer and nothing they say will make you change your mind. If they get frustrated or irritated because of this, it’s a clear sign they’re only using a script on you in order to close the deal ASAP. But I wish you never have to be in that situation and hope I convinced you not to ever consider signing up...

Who the f* are they to know what their spouse thinks or not? That one takes the cake for me. I don’t need to explain myself. I simply hope people find this as ridiculous as I do.

This is not an opportunity, it's a scheme to lure gullible people and sell them a dream they cannot achieve.

- Appropriate Music Playing (upbeat, no explicit)
- Color Printed 1-10s on clipboard.
- Make sure Host knows how to intro and SWAT is reminded how to close.
- Have sign in sheet and ensure every guest signs in
- As Each Guest Arrives

- A. Properly F.O.R.M. the guests so you know who you are presenting to.
- B. Proper use of F.O. R. M.
 "what do you love most about your job?"
 Example Answer: "I love working with great people."
 "What do you like least about your job?"
 Example Answer: "I dislike the long hours."

Intro to presentation

"I've found a way to earn money, on a part time basis, around my schedule. It's not just the money, it's the freedom and the incredible people I am able to work with now. So pay close attention because..."

- C. Make sure S.W.A.T. forms the guests as well
- D. Remember the name of all guests  writing their name down on a piece of paper in the order they are sitting ,  think of a word that rhymes with their name.

- 16. Prep the host on how to open and how to close the PBR.
- 17. Host open—
- 18. Intro Speaker (Edify)
- 19. Do not leave your seat at all for any reason
- 20. Do not interrupt the speaker at all for any reason
